Kuzho Lama has said that understanding the way things exist, particularly in relation to our own mind, can help us lead happier, more positive lives.

"In Buddhism we have the presentation of the basis, the path and then the results that follow from that. When we talk about 'the basis', as the name itself indicates it is something which is very basic. However, we are confused in relation to that and all our problems and all our troubles come from this basic misunderstanding. The basis is relevant to all of us and this is why His Holiness, the Dalai Lama also uses this terminology and refers to the basis as being 'Buddhist science'."
